Washington, D. C. — C. Pascom Stump, secretary to President Coolidge, Wednesday branded as "pure fabrication" the statement by Senator LaFollette, independent presidential candidate, that he would have charge of campaign "slush fund" for the Republican party.

"I know nothing about the Republican national committee's finances," said Mr. Stump, "and I have had no connection, direct or indirect, with the handling of them. Neither will I have in the future."

"It has not been suggested to me that I leave Washington in the interest of President Coolidge's candidacy, and I have had no thought of leaving."

Hoboken, N. J. — Determined to press his demand for a Senate investigation to establish whether a "slush fund" is being collected to "buy the election for President Coolidge in doubtful states," as he charged in an address Tuesday night at Scranton, Pa., Senator LaFollette invaded New Jersey Wednesday for a speech in Newark before swinging westward on a tour in the Pacific coast.

"I intend, he said, "to follow up vigorously my demand for an investigation of the special slush fund which is being collected under the direction of W. T. Mellon of Pittsburg, brother of the treasury secretary, and Edward T. Stotesbury, the Philadelphia partner of J. P. Morgan, for the alleged purpose of buying the election for Coolidge in the doubtful states."

"It is evident that this is a repetition of the tactics used by Mark Hanna in the campaign of 1896 when the famous message was sent to Col. Dudley of Indiana, with its instruction's 'vote them in blocks of five.' In that campaign a greater fund than ever previously had been collected for political purposes, was assembled by substantially the same methods that are now being used, and when election day came voters were openly bargaining for in the doubtful states."

"Ever since that time the progressives in congress have been sticking to the strict campaign expenditures, and to prevent the use of money for corrupt political purposes, they have introduced many bills designed to remedy these evils and purify American politics. In every instance the reactionary members of both old parties have joined to prevent the enactment of any law that had teeth."

AWAITS REPLY

Mr. LaFollette was awaiting a reply Wednesday to his telegram to Senator Borah of Idaho, chairman of the Senate committee on campaign expenditures, in which he demanded an immediate investigation of the alleged slush fund and urged him to subpoena Chairman Butler of the Republican national committee, W. T. Mellon, Mr. Stotesbury, Joseph Grundy, president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers association, and others who he declared in his Scranton address, had reason to believe had a hand in the effort to raise a "slush" fund of $300,000 or $4,000,000."

"I assume," said Senator LaFollette in his statement Wednesday, "that the committee will in the near future make public such information as it had obtained to date."

"My telegram to Senator Borah yesterday was to call his attention to the evidence of this extraordinary emergency collection, which clearly indicates that the Republican national committee has revised its campaign budget and now is planning to spend money on a huge scale. This revised budget may not appear in the routine reports sent by the Republican national committee to Senator Borah's committee."

"It is vital that the American people know before the election day exactly what the money interests are doing to influence their decision at the polls. I intend to see that they have this information."

The city now is quiet.

GUARDSMEN USE HOUNDS TO TRAIL MINE WAR GUNMEN

Coal Operator and Three Companions Shot from Ambush in Labor Fight

By Associated Press

Elkins, W. Va.—Lee J. Sandridge, one of the best known coal operators in West Virginia and prominent in Democratic political circles, was shot near Phillip Wednesday while enroute to the Sheridan mines to resume the operations on a non-union basis. Three men accompanying Mr. Sandridge also were wounded. The assailants fired from the underbrush along a road.

Mr. Sandridge, superintendent of the Rock Island Coal Co., owners of the mines, was given orders to resume operations Wednesday. For several years the mines operated under an agreement with the union but, after a shutdown of more than a month, officials of the company decided to resume without a union agreement.

"An investigation has been started in this matter," the foreign office spokesman said.

Shanghai—Forced to give ground during three days of fighting in the Sungtang district, 28 miles southwest of Shanghai, the defending Chekiang armies fought through the night and continued the grim battle between Shanghai and Sungtang Wednesday morning by withstanding attacks of the invading Kiangsu forces. The Kiangsu forces are attempting to cut the railway line between Shanghai and Sungtang, but the Chekiang armies reinforced Tuesday night held the railway with forces extending along the rails for a distance of about three miles in the environs of Sungtang.

Any attempt to move trains on the part of the Chekiang forces Wednesday, however, would be at great hazard as it would invite the full sweep of fire from the Kiangsu forces. All ordinary traffic over the railway line has been stopped.

Shanghai—The agreement arrived at between Chang Tso-Lin, the Manchurian leader, and the Soviet government does not differ in any essential from the agreement between L. M. Karakhan, the Soviet ambassador to Peking and Dr. Wellington Koo, the minister of foreign affairs of the central Chinese government, except in the shortening of the term, in which the Chinese Eastern railway reverts to China from eighty to sixty years from the date of the original agreement made in 1896.

The Chang-Soviet agreement runs between the government of the autonomous three eastern provinces of the Republic of China and the Soviet government.

SCOUTS WILL RING DOORBELLS TO GET VOTERS OUT NOV. 4

Valley Council Devises 6-City
Campaign—Starts Camp
Negotiations

House-to-house campaigning to make the people fulfill their duty as citizens by voting Nov. 4 will be attempted by the boy scouts in six cities and villages according to plans made by the executive committee of Valley council, Boy Scouts of America, at a meeting at headquarters Tuesday evening. The council also appointed standing committees and arranged for a survey of campsites on Lake Winnebago.

Enough posters will be purchased to placard Appleton, Neenah, Menasha, Kaukauna, Little Chute and Kimberly, where scout troops are located. These will picture Uncle Sam holding a sign showing how the percentage of people voting is less every year, from 80 per cent of the voting strength in 1896 to 49 per cent in 1920. They will contain a message also from each of the presidential candidates, Coolidge, Davis and La Follette.

MAKE PERSONAL APPEAL
Each city or village will be divided into districts and one scout assigned to each. The boy will make a personal call asking that everybody in the household vote. If nobody is at home he will leave a folder containing his message.

Stickers reading "Vote November 4th" purchased by the chamber of commerce will be distributed to autoists who will be asked to display them on their windshields. This work will begin next week.

INSPECT FARMS THURSDAY
Louis Bonini, president of the valley council, Dr. G. W. Carlson, M. H. Kettchenhofen and P. O. Kelscher, valley executive, were appointed committee to visit farms on the east shore of Lake Winnebago to look over campsites with the possibility that one will be leased. They will make the inspection Thursday.

Standing committees of the council were appointed as follows:

Camping, J. C. Kimberly, Dr. G. W. Carlson, Mowry Smith, Frank Charlesworth, M. H. Kettchenhofen, John Schommer.

Finance, W. G. Trilling, William Fountain, M. H. Kettchenhofen.

Troop organization, Lee C. Rasey, Dr. J. M. Donovan, M. G. Auer.

The council voted to have each district committee appoint its own scout commissioner and court of honor.

9-O'CLOCK GATE KEEPS BOOZE OUT

Uncle Sam Devises Way to Enforce Prohibition on Rio Grande Shore

El Paso, Tex.—Prohibition laws and the American constitution have no authority across the Rio Grande.

But United States customs men have made a 9-o'clock town out of the "wickedest city" on the other side of that border river.

They did it with a hog-wire gate. The gate is at the center of the rickety old wooden International Bridge that spans the Rio Grande. Every night at 9 the customs men swing shut the gate. Americans in Juarez, the "wickedest city," cannot come home. And Americans in El Paso, thirsty and ready for naughty adventure cannot cross the line.

QUIET BY 11
The hog-wire gate has had a deadening effect on the gambling halls, the cabarets and dance halls. The Calle del Diablo—the "Street of the Devil"—is as quiet as Main street, Gopher Prairie by 11.

Here and there are a couple of Mexican cabaret employees, homeward bound, or a little group of Americans who ignored the curfew bell that rings before the hog-wire gate is swung shut.

Business is poor at the Hotel Rio Bravo. There are plenty of rooms there now. A month ago a room was difficult to get.

TIVOLI EMPTY
The Tivoli gambling house, biggest of all, tried to ignore the gate on the bridge, tried to continue business as usual. Now at 10 p. m. the roulette tables—each of them, each with four playing cards—are empty, although ladies who could hardly get near enough to drop a coin on them.

The man at the craps table whistles "Three O'clock in the Morning" and the two croupiers groan. Some customers groan. Some hours ago the bandits in a room cornered a gun fight at the front door—but grossed they were even more nervous.

AMERICAN TYPE TAKES PLACE OF SHEIK HERO

Los Angeles—The day of the "sheik" in motion pictures is gone, killed by the "American type," according to leading stars and directors of Hollywood.

The fairer-looking heroes have lost their virtue and fallen into the running men for the likes of the "American type."

The women who are to opposite the male stars of the screen are sold to have had a great deal to do with the passing of the sheik.

Said one, "Son America that's my slogan and that's what I'm doing as we're for the Grand Old Flag."

"Patient with hair and passionate black eyes when I'm around, we're all right in that place but I'm not part of the make-up of a real American," declared another star.

GENIUS OF WAITER CREATED BEER TRADE

By Associated Press
London—The memory of Benjamin Kenton, the first man who bottled beer successfully for export, was honored at a banquet given by the Brewers' Co. here. In solemn silence the company drank to "the immortal memory of our late brother and benefactor Benjamin Kenton."

When 15 years of age Kenton was apprenticed to a hotel keeper, and later became a waiter and beer-drawer at one of London's old-fashioned public houses called the "Crown and Nag's Head." He married the daughter of the tavern keeper and prospered, and his fortune increased when he discovered the secret of bottling ale so that it could pass through the changes of climate on the voyage to hot countries without the cork flying out of the bottle.

The council voted to have each district committee appoint its own scout commissioner and court of honor.

URGE AGRICULTURE FOR IMMIGRANTS

Cleveland—Ancestral precedent does not influence the immigrant coming to make his home in American cities, if a survey of foreign consulates here is conclusive. Statistics show that natives of European countries, despite most of them having agricultural heritage, locate in cities and engage in industrial pursuits.

There are many reasons for this, according to the consuls. The Czechoslovak consul blames foreign employment bureaus to a certain degree. These bureaus, he says, bring natives of his country to direct employment in industrial centers, principally for steel mills. Landing at the steel mill with people of his own kind, the native remains. Many who are unable to speak the English language, choose to live in foreign settlements in cities where their native social life can be maintained.

Consuls were unanimous in their opinions that immigrants would better themselves by settling in agricultural centers. There, they say, the foreigners would more quickly learn the language and customs of America and find greater domestic peace.

Rex Ingram has scored again. We have never been able to write anything less than that about one of Mr. Ingram's productions and probably we never shall. This director seems satisfied with nothing less than perfection, not a mere technical perfection but that super-perfection which means artistic realism, finesse and distinction—and all of these he has attained in his latest production for Metro, "Where the Pavement Ends" now showing at the Majestic.

"TARNISH" IS EVERY WOMAN'S LOVE STORY

Youth, love and romance are bare in "Tarnish," the George Flamarique production which is being shown at the Eliza theatre today, tomorrow and Friday. It is a First National picture, presented by Samuel Goldwyn.

"Tarnish," which is an adaption of Gilbert Emery's famous stage play, is a drama of real life. The photoplay delves so deeply into the human fabric that one is forced to choke back the lump that rises in the throat.

Two young people are in love—fine, vigorous young people—but the past of the young man suddenly turns up to besmirch his happiness.

The young girl is shaken, tested, illuminated. What next? The hero and the heroine work in the same office. The maniac who provides the hero with a past is also engaged in libeling the heroine foolish reader. To top all of this, a gossipy neighbor who has been using the maniacal, sees the father entertain her and tell about it.

BONDAGE

Senator La Follette and the socialists assert that concentration of wealth in the hands of a few in this country continues, that the poor are getting poorer, that the people as a whole are in economic bondage. Nothing could be farther from the fact. There are many persons who shut their eyes to everything they see about them disproving such assertions, as well as to the facts of record. Such persons simply think from a prejudiced standpoint and do not care to admit the truth. Take agriculture, for instance, which is heralded far and wide by the radicals as being in a condition bordering on bankruptcy. In Wisconsin exactly the reverse is the fact. Agriculture here is in a state of prosperity.

There is no agricultural poverty anywhere in Wisconsin. There is no real labor poverty. We are in an excellent state of prosperity and have been all along. Wisconsin is a veritable garden of Eden, compared with any agricultural or industrial community anywhere in the world outside of the United States. If we could set it down beside similar territory of Russia, Germany, France, Great Britain, Italy, we would see in an instant what we have to be thankful for in America.

Now, what are the facts about prosperity and the lack of wealth distribution in the United States? Federal statistics show that the number of people living in almshouses in 1923 in the United States totaled only 78,070. Fourteen years ago, in 1910, with more than 10,000,000 less population, there was a larger number of poorhouse inmates, to wit: 84,198. Let us go back further. In 1850 the nation's poorhouse population was 132 per 100,000. Today it has shrunk to somewhere around 70, or has been practically cut in two. If we are not striking at the roots of poverty and increasing the opportunities of the poor, the illiterate and the least able to serve themselves, what are we to infer from these figures?

For the year ended June 30, 1923, the savings deposits of the school children of the United States were $10,631,558. For the same period ending June 30, 1924, they were $20,135,144.

The gain in twelve months is practically 100 per cent. What does this reflect but increased thrift and a wider participation by the people at large in the wealth and production of the country?

The enormous growth of savings deposits in every city in the country testifies to the same thing. The large increase in home ownership is still further proof. High wages, the money spent by the rank and file on such luxuries as moving pictures, automobiles, phonographs, radios, etc., now regarded as necessities, are a striking picture of wealth distribution and enlarged buying power.

The talk about economic slavery in this country about lack of opportunity for self-advancement, about enforced poverty is all in the imagination. It does not exist and never has existed and in fact Victor Berger explicitly admits as much when he explains why socialism is a complete failure in the United States and cannot be expected to succeed. That is the reason and the sole reason he is casting his interests with those of Senator La Follette in this election. If any people in the world should benefit by experience and by the lessons of their own history, it is a people of the United States where their self-improvement and their common advancement have been the most remarkable ever recorded, and where the pathway to further progress by preservation of their existing institutions and a continuance of the constructive development that has gone on uninterruptedly since this nation was founded, is clearly indicated.

VALUE AND COST OF HIGHWAYS

The United States bureau of public roads and the Connecticut highway department are preparing to make a joint investigation of the cost of rural highways and roads both in capital investment and maintenance and of the developmental effects, such as increased land values and collateral benefits. This study will be highly useful, as it will be a practical comparison of the city thoroughfare and the country highway.

Road construction is both an investment and an expense. It would be better to say that road construction is treated generally as an expense, whereas it is, in fact, an investment. The cost of construction is returned, almost without exception in material benefits. It is the rule that good highways pay for themselves.

Maintenance of non-paved highways is a continuous expense. How far the profits from good roads in the material and other advantages exceed these expenses is an important problem concerning which little is known up to date, as the cost of the upkeep of roads in relation to the benefits enjoyed has never been analyzed.

Economically, the rural highway is in a class with the city highway and the country road with the city side-street or the residential avenue. The highway and thoroughfare are public traffic arteries. Secondary streets and roads serve special purposes.

In the federal-Connecticut survey an attempt will be made to apportion maintenance costs among passenger cars and trucks, business and non-business vehicles. These statistics will indicate the public-service cost of maintenance, as well as the public-service value of highways. The determination of highway benefits by practical experience is well established by real estate and rent. But they have not been demonstrated with exactness, and the Connecticut investigation should bring out points not only of interest but also of value.

STRIKING AT THE SOURCE

To curb the traffic in habit-forming drugs, an international conference will be held in November in Switzerland. The American delegates will strike directly at the heart of the problem. They will urge limitation of the growing of the poppy, cocoa plant and other raw materials that furnish drugs for addics. Could any way be more direct and sensible? The trouble is it is too direct to suit countries that make big profits out of growing the raw materials. They had the same proposal put up to them a year ago, but they talked about curbing manufacture of drugs, appointing committees—anything to avoid curtailing the output of raw materials. As long as the poppy and other raw materials for drugs are grown, they will be made into drugs. The growing of raw materials for drugs is a highly organized industry. Opium farming is a common occupation in the orient. Commercialized evils are difficult to control, let alone uprooting.

MIGHT AS WELL BE SENSIBLE

A reader telling of his unhappy experience in shopping around for a "reasonable" specialist to do something any ordinary doctor can do well enough, excuses, when a third specialist canvassed named a few higher than either of the others: "Then I got mad and decided the less I saw of doctors the longer I would live."

The same day a young woman wrote me how she made it her rule to "think health."

And crossing on the ferry that afternoon, early in the rainy season, two darkies were singing with guitar and banjo accompaniment, "It Ain't Gonna Rain No Mo."

As though that were not enough, almost the first letter I opened this morning was from a gentleman who has evidently made an extensive study of fishiology, for he assures me that there is no need of walking miles every day to get oxygen—one has only to devote about 4 minutes every morning to the practice of deep breathing before the open window. Just why the open window is always featured in this fool performance I have never learned, but I reckon the fishial culture magazine will order health expert who first marketed this particular bit of hokum included the open window as part of the scenery.

Well, it all struck me as a kind of epidemic of near psycholgy. Polyanne Psychology. That "Grand and win" stuff—smile, you halfwit, smile!

Within rational limitations I believe in psycholgy, yet it seems to me that those darkies iterate and reiterate in tuneful harmony that cessation of the aqueous precipitation was imminent, really had no appreciable influence upon the weather. The chap who undertakes to absorb more oxygen by the simple expedient of breathing more deeply for a few moments—before an open window—could as readily hoist himself out of the window and over the house by pulling on his own bootstraps. The young woman who "thinks health" reminds us of the boy who endeavored to play a straight furrow by keeping his eye on a cow across the creek; our popular magazines fairly seethe with bait which the fishologists offer to the unwary. That reader who resentfully decided that the less he saw of doctors the longer he would live ought to read some of the brief and tragic biographies of the great army of consumptives who have recklessly set out on that very course.

Economically, the rural highway is in a class with the city highway and the country road with the city side-street or the residential avenue. The highway and thoroughfare are public traffic arteries. Secondary streets and roads serve special purposes.

In the federal-Connecticut survey an attempt will be made to apportion maintenance costs among passenger cars and trucks, business and non-business vehicles. These statistics will indicate the public-service cost of maintenance, as well as the public-service value of highways. The determination of highway benefits by practical experience is well established by real estate and rent. But they have not been demonstrated with exactness, and the Connecticut investigation should bring out points not only of interest but also of value.

It is fitting to quote here a passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Glover Eddy.

"Until the advancing age admits the efficiency and supremacy of mind, it is better to leave surgery and the adjustment of broken bones and dislocations to the fingers of a surgeon, while you confine yourself chiefly to mental reconstruction and the prevention of inflammation. Christian science is always the most skillful surgeon but surgery is the branch of its healing which will be last acknowledged. However, it is just to say that the author has already in her possession well authenticated records of cure, by herself and her students, through mental joints and spinal vertebrae."

There, now, let's try to be sensible and not carry this psychopolianyology too far.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Smoking Cigarettes

What remedy do you advise for the cure of smoking cigarettes? (Anxious)

Answer.—Dash a pall of water on them if there is no fire hose handy. I haven't any antitobacco tracts. I am not particularly prejudiced against tobacco even in the form of cigarettes. I do not advise any indiscriminate remedy for the tobacco habit. But if the tobacco habit has you and you haven't sufficient won't power to control it, I'll be glad to give you some suggestions to help you control it if you ask for them yourself. Please understand that I know of no specific cure for tobaccoism.

Men Make Sure No Women Will Get Into Party

A battle of the sexes is foreseen as a result of an announcement of a "men only" party that is to be held Friday evening in the First Methodist church. The word has been passed out to all the male of the species in the congregation that this is to be a genuine "stag" party. Sentries will be stationed at the doors to see that nothing that wears dresses will slip into the meeting. Men will cook the dinner, although some women have their doubts, men will wait on tables and, strangest of all, men will wash and wipe the dishes. A regular men's feed will be served and a men's program will follow the 7 o'clock dinner.

Rumor has it that the wives of the members are to hold a secret indignation meeting at the parsonage and will endeavor to have the proposed party declared nonconforming to the canons of the church.

Kaukauna—At the monthly meeting of the common council Tuesday evening the city clerk was authorized to advertise for sealed bids for the construction of the new bridge across the Fox River and the transportation canal. This will be received at the office of the city clerk up to 7 o'clock Tuesday evening, Nov. 18. The date of opening the bids was set ahead far enough to allow for the settlement of a slight technicality which has arisen in connection with preparations for the bond issue. The bonding attorney to whom all proceedings have been submitted has advised the mayor and common council that notice of the special election or the question of a bond issue for the construction of the bridges had been published only once in the official paper instead of twice as required. He therefore refused to take further steps and recommended the matter to the state attorney general for a decision. But stated the council might continue with its preparations for letting the contract.

Major C. E. Doughty attempted to secure an audience with the attorney general for Saturday and if his opinion is satisfactory the work of preparing the bonds can proceed. Should the attorney general rule that the oversight is an irregularity which cannot be rectified, it will be necessary to advertise again and hold another special election. It is the opinion of Joseph W. LeFevre, city attorney, that the matter will easily be righted since he says the law plainly reads that an irregularity in publication shall not invalidate a special election.

WANT NEW RECORD
FOR NEXT FAIR DAYKeshena Indians Will Establish Village as Feature
Attraction

Kaukauna—The program which officials of the Tri County Stock Fair association have arranged for next Saturday will undoubtedly make the monthly stock fair the biggest yet held in this city. The association is continuing its strenuous method of advertising in an attempt to bring more farmers into the city every month.

The main attraction in the way of entertainment for this month's fair will be the Keshena Indians who are expected to arrive Thursday or Friday to install their village. Second will be closed to traffic from Milwaukee to Reedsburg and in that space the Indians will have full sway.

A call has been issued for several hundred boys and girls to march in a parade. The fair association has even made arrangements with an elephant owner to be on hand to furnish thrill for those who wish to take a ride above mother earth.

The entertainment by the Indians is said to be well worth while. The Indians will be in full native costume and will give people visiting Kaukauna on Saturday a vision into past. Several prominent politicians of the state are scheduled to be here to give talks.

Adventures In The Library

By ARNOLD MULDER

THE LURE OF THE TREASURE HUNT

Almost every romanticist has at one time or another written a story about a hunt for hidden treasure. Probably the king of all books of this type is Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island," which always remains fresh and new because a genuine cast a spell over it that defies analysis. But the idea of hunting for hidden treasure has been exploited so often in fiction that it would seem impossible to ring new changes on it, but in spite of this a writer occasionally succeeds in giving a new twist to the theme.

It is the treasure that has been found in treasure hunt stories, from the immense wealth unearthed by the Count of Monte Carlo to the latest thriller in a ten cent magazine, has been actual and not imaginary wealth

One can almost be sure to find approximately the same grouping of characters in each of Locke's novels—the shaggy, lovable bearlike savage Amos, in this case, but typical of character writings—the cultivated gentleman, David Forney, refined to an aesthetic sensitiveness, and acutely aware of situations beauty, and character. And there inevitably follows some form of warfare between each type. Locke seems to be struggling to answer for himself the question "does the culture civilization gives make a man any stronger—any more fit to decide the greatest questions of the universe—those of love, and of honor. Sometimes, civilization wins, as in "The Morals of Marcus Ordene," and at others, primitive instincts triumphs as in "The Coming of Amos." It doesn't so much matter to us which is victory. The problem is always interesting, and enigmatic, and we are glad that we are able to welcome these characters by no means merely puppets, brought by the artist fingers of Locke, back into our midst, reincarnated it is true, but with the same appeal.

The charm in the book which to me surpassed all others lay in the glorious beauty of the Rivera coast as seen through the painted eyes of David—"The beloved Azores Coast, and its mad carnival riot of flowers. You must see the setting, too, if you are to understand the intensely beautiful atmosphere into which a bearish Amos is so rudely precipitated. David says of a sight over the Mediterranean, as he looks out over a morning sea, "As the eye swept westward, the pride of dying splendor softened the light of a pure amber in which the still obedient sea melted into sultry tones of purple and pale mauve, above which rose the old town, surmounted by its two square towers, which have watched for centuries across the infinitely changing sea, the coast of Africa, and its romantic perils."

And into this, Amos plunges unseeing. He has been brought up in an ultra religious atmosphere, and the laxity of society, the gambling, and the life of pleasure shock him. But he falls in love with the fascinating Russian Princess Nadia, whom also the painter David loves, seeing her in all the full glory of "Baffing mother-of-pearl over peachblow of her flesh, and the sorrowful mischief in the hazel and green slinkiness of her eyes." And the struggle begins between the sensitive, cultured, middle-aged David, and the blundering, kindly but seriously young Amos, complicated by the inevitable villain, and the secondary love story of David's step-daughter.

There is pathos in the longing David has for youth. He says, "But I was a middle-aged Oliver, out of sympathy with Puritan vacancies." And there is a great deal of delirious humor, resulting from Amos' blunders, and incompatibility with pink teas.

And finally, Amos serenely wins the fight. And he explains, excuses and justifies his victory by just one sentence.

"I am young," he said. "The unconscious glibness of it," thought David to himself.

Julia Scott Vrooman, author of "The High Road to Honor," published on September 12th by Milton Balch and Company, is well equipped to write this novel of social and political Washington. She is the wife of Carl Vrooman, who was Assistant Secretary of Agriculture under President Wilson. Although she, herself, knows Washington and parliamentary rule inside out she was assisted by Vice-President Marshall in making sure that the smallest detail in such matters was correct. Colonel House saw the novel in MS. and gave the following opinion: "Mrs. Vrooman has written a book of absorbing interest and has given it a definite, Dr. Price and Senator Brandon three characters that typify what is best in American life."

A. C. Benson, whose "From a College Window" has become a classic, is the author of two books on the recent Putman list. One is "The Tenant," a biographical treatment of his father, the late Archbishop of Canterbury and the other is "Memories and Friends" which deals with such Victorian figures as Mrs. Oliphant, Oscar Browning and many others.

"The Heritage of Cotton," listed for early publication by Putmans, is written by M. D. C. Crawford an expert in the textile field and also an ethnologist of note. The author has told the story of cotton in its many phases, ethnological, economic, political and otherwise since its discovery more than thirty centuries ago. The least interesting point is the relation of cotton to the theory held by many authorities that there was in prehistoric times a cultural bond between the Orient and the continent of the Americas. The book is, in many respects, unique and perhaps the most comprehensive of its kind ever published.

Theatrical Hewing has improved during the last hundred years according to accounts of the frontier drama given in Walter Pritchard Eaton's new work, "The Actor's Heritage." On one occasion a barnstorming troupe was playing in a tiny town in upper New York State where there were not even candles to illuminate the stage. What they did was to nail strips of linen in a hollow and set them in position with holes bored in them. The audience was delighted and did not leave until the last ray of light flickered out into the foggy night.

And finally, Amos serenely wins the fight. And he explains, excuses and justifies his victory by just one sentence.

"I am young," he said. "The unconscious glibness of it," thought David to himself.

"Arabs in Tent and Town" is the title of a book by A. Goodwin, in which the Putmans are the chief characters. The author's real name is Mrs. H. H. Speer and her book has been one of singular interest. An old woman of cultivation and extraordinary energy she went many years ago to Palestine to manage the local estate there of her friend the Marquis of Bute. Until that time the estate had been operated at a loss, but under her management and with her understanding of the natives, she was within a few years was producing a annual profit of 17 per cent. Mrs. Speer made it a rule to keep in close touch with the Marquis and always so her book possesses an added interest in authenticity due to such a long life.

Old Sherlock Has Betrayed His Identity

tive type while fumbling at first literary efforts I thought of my old shouting details," Doyle writes.

It may interest struggling writers to know that Doyle had no easy time second is "Peacock Feathers" by Temple Bailey. "Everybody wants to read 'Peacock Feather,'" the librarian said.

James Oliver Curwood's "A Gentleman of Courage," although it has been in circulation for some time, still continues to be a favorite. "Charles Sees It Through," by Margaret Wilder, another book that has been much in demand.

Any book of fiction that is new is popular, according to the librarians, and the demand for new books almost exceeds the demand for any one particular volume.

Since the life of Abraham Lincoln was shown in motion pictures at a local theatre the librarians have noticed an increase in the circulation of biographies of the martyr president.

In the children's department the best circulators have been "Fifty Famous Stories Retold" by James Baldwin and "Thirty More Famous Stories" also by Baldwin. The young people have wanted to read books on Indians and of these the most popular have been "Indian Boyhood," by C. A. Eastman and "The Story of the Indian" by C. B. Grinnell.

In "Study in Scarlet" and gave Doyle the equivalent of $100.

"This was not a tempting offer and, poor as I was, I hesitated to accept," he writes. "For them it was a wonderful bargain, for they not only brought out many editions but had the valuable cinema rights for this paltry sum."

It was much the same with "Micah Clarke." The book went begging until Andrew Lang urged a publisher to bring it out. Then came "The Sign of the Four," "The White Company" and "Sir Nigel."

It was a somewhat startling literary admission; he rather resents having ever written "Study in Scarlet."

Such is the peculiar divergence of opinion between writer and public that Sherlock looms as one of the most widely known fiction characters of the age while Sir Nigel is known to but a handful.

"I believe that had I never touched Holmes, who has tended to obscure my higher work, my position in literature would be a more commanding one," moans Doyle.

The book also contains many interesting literary anecdotes and tales of adventure in South Africa.

New York National Pilot Reverts to Southpaw Tactics After Senators Even Series

BOWLING

By Associated Press

New York—“Bucky” Harris, bow manager of the Senators and John McGraw, veteran pilot of the Giants meet Wednesday in the fifth game of their seven-round bout for the world's series championship.

The first four sessions developed in to a battle of rights and lets with the margin strongly in favor of the southpaw swings. Tuesday Harris evened up the fight by taking the fourth round by a score of 7 to 4, the widest margin of the struggle. George Mogridge a left handed pitcher, and “Goose” Goslin a polished batter, jolted the Giants silly.

Wednesday McGraw will revert to his southpaw tactics and use Arthur Nehf if the latter's injured hand permits. Otherwise the New York hurler will be Bentz or Watson. Harris will utilize the hefty right hand punch which won the pennant. Walter Johnson, veteran of 15 years of diamond battling, is out.

Meanwhile, the public is enjoying the baseball battle of the century. Tuesday 49,248 people, the largest paid attendance which ever witnessed a game at the Polo Grounds cheered the visiting Senators even more than the home Giants. Wednesday another record breaking crowd was expected.

The purses for which the teams are battling amounts to $45,819.88. Each Giant will draw about $5,781 by winning or $3,821 by losing. The winning Senator figure would be about $4,319.

Roger Peckinpaugh, shortstop of the Senators was not able to play Tuesday because of a charley-horse and will not be used Wednesday unless the injury has improved beyond expectations. Blaize took his place at shortstop and Miller replaced Blaize at third. The absence of the veteran Peckinpaugh weakened the impenetrable infield until the far corner resembled a sieve.

Appleton High School Squad Works Overtime To Get Set For Fondy

Orange Gridders Go Through Heavy Drill in Preparation for Aerial Tactics Used by Red and White

Aerial tactics probably will play a big part when Appleton high school invades Fond du Lac Saturday afternoon for its second football tilt of the season. Displaying a strong passing attack the Red and White Saturday defeated Manitowoc, 6 to 0, and since Monday the Fondy coach has been drilling his men to develop this phase of their game even more.

The Red and White squad was not as strong as usual on straight foot ball, but managed to hold the Shipbuilders scoreless and probably will give the Appleton youngsters plenty to do this week. Captain Musolf was the mainstay in both offense and defense, while Hansen, left halfback, starred on the aerial stuff when he nipped an attempted pass and carried the ball across for the only touch down of the game.

Fake plays kept the Manitowoc puzzlers and played an important part in Fondy's game. Every man on the squad seems to know exactly what is expected of him and the Red and White promises to be one of the shiftest squads in the conference later in the season.

Working on the information gained through the Manitowoc contest, Coach Julie Kevin is drilling his men early and late in preparation for Saturday. A new dummy has been put up on the Appleton high school drill field and its been dug for tackling work. The scrubs, using Fond du Lac plays engage the regulars in scrimmage every afternoon. While the Orange has made some progress since Saturday's defeat at Sheboygan, the players still are far from the standard set for them by Kevin and are due to go through the harshest week of drill in their experience before the Fond du Lac game.

EVERY RED IN REICHSTAG HAD PRISON EXPERIENCE

By Associated Press

Berlin—Only two members of the present communist delegation in the Reichstag can be classified as belonging to the intelligentsia. One of them is a lawyer, the other, Ruth Fischer, a university graduate. All the rest are plain workers. It is also an interesting fact that there is not one member of the communist delegation but has at some time or other been in prison for political offenses.

The metal workers claim 12, seven are office workers, five are miners, five carpenters, three masons, two railway workers, two transport workers, one a cook, and one is a professional masseur.

Other trades represented in the communist delegation are printing, tobacco raising, shoe making and house painting.

CAN'T MEET EXPENSES

It was found that the average wage ran from 4,800 to 6,000 francs a year.

The inquiry showed that families do not succeed in bridging such a gap by doing extra work.

The result is they live in hovels and slums, they are undernourished, washing clothes is cut down to a minimum, the children grow up puny and sickly. A sickness that entails the need of a doctor and medicines is a burden and another baby is a misfortune.

Washington and Jefferson Surprised Lafayette by Scoring Point After Touchdown With Pass

By EARLE "GREASY" NEALE
Football Coach, University of Virginia, Formerly Coach, Washington and Jefferson

WASHINGTON AND JEFFERSON rooters in the stands were crying for the point that meant victory. Entreat them demanding, entreating. Yet when the coveted point came the first expression from the stands was a wall of distress—abruptly converted into a howl of triumph. It is true, but the fact that the first impulse of the intent onlookers was to despair when they should have cheered shows how smooth was the execution of the greatest play I have yet seen in football.

Lafayette had beaten 13 to 0 at the end of the first half of our game at the Polo Grounds, New York in 1922. Late in the second half we tied the score and victory was ours if we could register the extra point after touchdown. It was the effort to score that point that produced the play I am describing.

We lined up to drop kick for the needed point. But when Kopf had called the signals he noticed the Lafayette secondary defense move up to the first, whereupon he turned to Captain Breckart and cautioned, "Be sure and make it good." That was the signal to change to a forward pass. So complete was the deception in the play that not a Lafayette man was within 15 yards of Kopf when he caught the ball. And as I said above, our supporters in the stands thought Breckart had attempted a kick and failed.

The week before we had been able to tie Georgia Tech because under similar circumstances West had kicked a goal though how he ever did it I don't know as Tech had brought 16 men into the line in the effort to block his kick. They should have succeeded. That is why the forward pass alternative was conceived.

"Profit by your mistakes," the moral writers tell us. And by your near mistakes, I would add. It came near being a mistake for us not to change the play when Carnegie Tech threw all its effort into blocking that kick. We were lucky to score and knew it. So when the situation recurred within a week we were ready. And didn't it pay?

George Mogridge Tuesday afternoon held the Giants to three scattered runs up to the eighth inning when he was replaced by Maribyrn. Mogridge was given his chance after the New York Nationals had found most of his mates on the Washington pitching staff easy meat in the three previous games, and came through in fine shape.

COOLIDGE, DAWES NEVER RODE "GOAT"

Both Republican Presidential Candidates Never Mixed In Fraternal Affairs

Washington—Despite his approval of fraternal orders as voiced by his address a few weeks ago to representatives of the fraternal congress who called at the White House, President Coolidge is not a joiner. He belongs to no lodges, societies or similar organizations and knows no secret signs, passwords or initials.

By accident rather than by design the Catholic society sent out questions aimed at securing the average budget of expenses for necessities of a family consisting of a worker, his wife and four children below 14. Then it inquired as to the average wages of such laborers.

It was found that the average budget required for food a year was 6,000 francs. For other expenses the general average was 3,000 francs annually.

DEBATE CAUSE OF LABOR IN ORIENT AT GENEVA MEETING

Will Collect All Available Data on Abuse of Child Labor in Far East

Geneva—Labor conditions in China and Japan formed a feature of the discussions at the international labor conference. Following statements by the British labor group, who remarked upon the importance of reports that grave abuses of child labor existed in China, Director Albert Thomas of the Labor Bureau, promised to collect all available information on this question so that the labor organization could be informed as to exact conditions.

As to Japan, Mr. Mayeda, the chief governmental delegate, delivered an address which sought to refute allegations previously made by a Japanese labor delegate that Japan was not faithfully carrying out the stipulations of labor conventions which had been duly ratified by the Japanese government.

The labor delegate having complained that Japan ratified through her privy council instead of her parliament, fearing that parliament would be too liberal towards the interests of the workers, Mr. Mayeda rejoined by saying that ratification by the privy council constituted "a competent authority" within the meaning of the treaty of Versailles. He remarked with some pride that Japan was in the vanguard of countries ratifying various labor conventions.

Bunji Suzuki, who has played a prominent part in the Japanese labor movement complained that few countries had ratified the convention adopted by the third international labor conference recognizing the right of agricultural workers to form unions. He added that numerous countries even refuse the right of syndicalism to industrial workers. For instance in Japan, he pointed out, the great majority of enterprises are run by the state and on that account trade unionism developed fairly well. The right of association was recognized in principle but the fact is that labor leaders are subject to a close surveillance and forced to endure a regime of life less favorable than their colleagues. Under these conditions asserted Mr. Suzuki, trade unions in Japanese state enterprises had little chance of developing and still less opportunity of affiliating with great international organizations.

Mr. Suzuki quoted from a statement of Mr. Mayeda the government delegate, who had declared that freedom of association was a constitutional right in Japan. It was perhaps a constitutional right, declared the Tokio labor leader, but the truth is that existing legislation hinders the exercise of that right.

"The Nervous Wreck"

By E. J. Rath

Copyright 1924 by NEA Service Inc.

"I don't think your just what grasps it, man. He don't seem to quite have hold of the situation. Here I am with the less count, and no cook somebody's got to set these meals I can't eat, Tom. There ain't one of the boys that can cook good enough. They can rustle dinner for themselves, but they don't know any city tricks. I've got to have a cook."

Sally smoothed her apron and smiled again.

"It's too bad," she said. "I can see what a fix you are in. You've been very kind to us. We've had a wonderful breakfast, and we'd just love to oblige you. But we happen to be just catching a train. We're going east. In fact we're really behind our time now. So I don't see how we can, Mr. McSween, although otherwise we'd be glad to help you out. Wouldn't we be Henry?"

The Wreck eyed her critically. It doesn't make any difference whether we would or we wouldn't," he said. "The point is, we don't."

The foreman drew at his pipe for half a minute and stared at the floor. "I'm sure sorry you feel that way about it," he mused. "I sort of figured you were just honeymoonin' around with nothing particular to do, and that you'd pitch in. I'll pay you regular Cain wages. I ain't making any distinctions because you don't happen to be professional to the business."

"Can't be done," said the Wreck with an impatient gesture and another look at his watch. "We happen to be catching a train just now. Speaking of paying, of course we'll pay for our breakfast."

Charley McSween dismissed the idea with a gesture and studied the pair with reflective eyes. Then he sighed.

"I ain't for me," he said. "To go him into the face of an act of Providence. I'm a believer in meeting Providence half way when she turns up a card for you. I'm sorry plumb sorry, that you, man, and your husband don't feel like you ought to stay. But we'd make it as pleasant for you as we can and we won't keep you no longer than is necessary."

Sally arose to her feet with a gasp of surprise and sought the eyes of the Wreck. He was boring a glance in the direction of Charley McSween. "Let me understand you," he said. "Are you talking about keeping us here, whether we want to stay or not?"

"That's the unfortunate idea," said the foreman, regretfully.

The Wreck laughed nervously. "You'll be quite busy keeping us," he said. "Come on, Sally."

Charley McSween unlimbered himself from his chair and stood up.

"You don't get it all yet," he said. "You don't either of you understand the works of Providence. Now it seems that when Providence fetched you here and the lady proved that she could cook, and the gentleman proved that he could wash dishes and dry 'em, it wasn't for no ordinary human being to set himself up to say, 'No.' So I says to Providence, 'What are we going to do to persuade these young married folks to take hold of this here emergency job and see it through.' And Providence says, 'Leave it to me.'

"Now it seems Providence knows how to operate one of these flappers. So Providence takes flitter and runs it down into one of the sheds. Havin' done that much, Providence convinces the idea of takin' off one of the front wheels, which is also done in a workmanlike manner, with no damage to parts. Sail wheel having been removed from the shed, is hid elsewhere, nobody but Providence known where it was put."

Charley McSween spread his hands with an eloquent gesture.

"Now you get an idea of the way Providence works," he said.

The Wreck stepped to the door of the kitchen and looked out into the yard. When he came back he was removing his spectacles.

"I can lick you," he said to the foreman.

"No you don't," said Sally as she stepped in front of him. "Not yet, at any rate. Mr. McSween, kindly leave the kitchen. We want to have a little talk about things."

Charley McSween moved hesitantly toward the door.

"The cook's always the boss in the kitchen," he said.

CHAPTER VII.

In Lieu of Chinks.

The Wreck wanted to follow Charley McSween out the door, but Sally had a grip on his arm that he could not loosen without being rough. She dragged him to a chair, pushed him into it and stood guard.

"You listen to me before you do anything else," she said. "You're going to follow Charley McSween out the door, but you're not going to start in now."

"What's the reason I can't start now?" I'm not going to take up a lot of time at it. Do you want me to wait until he gets his gang around him?"

Sally regarded him severely. "He seemed so much like a bad little boy that sometimes she despaired of getting anything reasonable out of him."

"You're always ready to fight somebody," she said. "And there isn't any sense in it. Besides what good would it do us right now?" Suppose you do whip him, if it's mistake you feel and better the result that you can whip him from his feet up. But suppose you do—that doesn't help to find the wheel he took off the car, does it? We'd have to stay around here anyhow until he got ready to give it back to us. You can't run a flitter on three wheels."

"I might," he said, stubbornly.

"Well, if you could, I wouldn't ride in it, so that settles that. It might give you a lot of satisfaction to get into a fight with him, but it wouldn't get us anywhere. It would only make a lot more trouble, and we've got enough now."

"It doesn't bother me any."

"That's just it," said Sally. "It doesn't seem to make any difference to you how much trouble you stir up. But we can't afford to have any more right away—and we're not going to have it."

The Wreck regarded her with a look of intense disgust.

"Do I look like a dishwasher?" he demanded. "Do you think anybody can make me wash dishes?"

"Suppose I asked you to wash them?"

He shook his head irritably.

"You haven't got any right to ask me."

"Yes, I have. I'm in this thing as much as you are and I have just as many rights as you have. And if it's necessary for you to wash dishes, then you ought to be glad to wash them for the general good."

Sally piffl'd him. She appeared to be abandoning herself to a situation that was preposterous and intolerable. It did not seem like Sally at all.

"What about your train?" he inquired.

"The train's got to wait for the present," she answered, with a shrug.

"You mean to tell me you're going to stick around here and take orders like a trained set?" You're going to cook for this outfit?"

She reached for a chair and seated herself opposite him.

"Do you realize, Henry Williams, that I'm trying to save you? I don't claim any credit for it, because I'm trying to save myself, too. Have you forgotten what you did last night?"

"Do you want to go roaming out on the road again, to be picked up and sent off to jail? Well, if you do, I don't. We've got to hide somewhere until this thing blows over. And if you can think of any better place than that to hide, I can't."

"I only took a little gasoline," he said, impatiently.

"And you only held them up with a gun, too. And scared the life out of them, and made them sit in the road, and humiliated them, and let all the air out of their tires. And you didn't pay for the gasoline, either, so that's stealing. You'd better take it from me, you've done something to hide for. I know Montana, if I don't know much else. You can't do things like that any more."

The Wreck scowled at the floor.

"How about a bird who steals the wheel off your car? Can he do things like that?"

"No; he hasn't any right of course. But it's gone, and I'm not sure but that's also an act of Providence, as Charley McSween says. I have a hunch that what we need right now is a hide-out, and this gives us one without hunting for it. Besides, we can eat here."

"And how long do you think we're going to stay parked around here, Sally Morgan?"

"Oh, not long. That depends. I'm sure we'll get the wheel back for the car by the time we ought to start."

He pondered the prospect gloomily. The thing to do, of course, was to kick Charley McSween; no man can eat here."

But he was not so entirely a creature of impulse as Sally believed him.

There was a streak of calculation in him; it could not be called caution, but it involved a certain degree of pre-meditation and reckoning of consequences. He could see Sally's point about the hide-out. It irked him to acknowledge that it had merit; he would not publicly admit it. But he was honest with himself. His fundamental urge was to thrash Charley McSween until he produced the missing wheel and then to rush Sally away to the nearest point on the railroad, where he guaranteed to stop any transcontinental flier that might happen along even if he had to stalk the driver in the middle of the track. But it might not be the quickest way of getting Sally out of a mess. Perhaps it might be better to think things over a bit; not that he wanted to, but that it might be his unobtrusive duty.

"I'm not worrying about myself one bit," she assured him. "I'm worrying more about you."

The Wreck burst out. "What in blazes would you worry about me?"

"Well, you were expecting to go back to the ranch, weren't you?"

"That's nothing. I told them I might not be back the same night."

You Possess Latent Ability To Cultivate Charm Of Fine Culture

By EVANGELINE WEED
Director of Personal Institute,
Boston

Do you often find yourself admiring in awe the "personality" of an other?

Do you tell yourself that you lack "personality"?

Do you justify your deficiency by explaining to yourself that personality is something that one is born with or without?

Probably you do—most people do.

Know that you can develop your personality as you can develop your muscles!

Every normal person equipped with intelligence and the power of speech, possesses the tools with which he can make his personality.

Personality, properly developed frees one of such negative qualities as awkwardness, self consciousness, indecisiveness, indecisiveness, bashfulness, worries and discontent.

A person is so conscious only when he admits it to himself.

A person possessing a confident personality never admits such things.

Every person can improve his personality and consequently his whole being by a few simple rules for mental and physical discipline.

Doctors, lawyers, statesmen, professors, students, housewives have all studied themselves through the methods of self-analysis and self development employed in the Boston Personality Institute. Of their success, I'll not state merely pointing to the recognized success of the institution after five years.

These losses are taken from the regular course that is given students attending the institute. Each is short. For the most part the lessons are designed to convince the reader of their own potential personality qualities and to point out their deficiencies. These lessons propose to provide or inspire the students in making further and independent inquires into their own character.

You have personality. Perhaps you have neglected it.

Read these lessons. Go to your public library for more thorough research.

Remember. Good personality can be acquired much the same as a language can be learned.

MISS EVANGELINE WEED

Fear Makes You Aware Of Yourself

By EVANGELINE WEED
Director of Personal Institute,
Boston

Self-consciousness always comes from the fear of making an unfavorable impression. Fear is never coming to the person as it detracts entirely from one's personality.

Personality is the show window of one's fear.

Fear and self-consciousness simply hold your soul in bondage and smother your impulses. It is an unhealthy standard of thinking and many scientists claim that self-consciousness brings on nervousness, physical breakdown, discouragement in business and other serious difficulties.

Scientists assert that people suffering from self-consciousness imagine themselves inferior to others—they possess an inferiority complex.

The "cure" can be effected through mental direction.

Many people are self-conscious because of their limitations. They may be self-conscious of their limited vocabulary, their manner of speech and their physical appearance. These things can be corrected easily.

Discover the cause of your self-consciousness and then set about to correct it.

It will be the object of this series of lessons to help the reader put his finger on his own weakness. Once he identifies it he can find ample material in the library to correct it, to strengthen his character, to acquire the desired personality.

Thus this series is, in a way, an index of the reader's means of self-analysis. The reader will have to recognize what part of it applies to him and what part does not.

Combinations of gold and silver tissue are noticed in the smartest evening wraps and gowns.

PATTERED VELVETS

Patterened velvets are very gorgeous this season so are the shaded and painted effects.

LARGE HATS

Large black velvet hats are most effective with a dash of brilliant red in the flower ornament that forms the trimming.

USED EFFECTIVELY

Bias folds and sections of cross-tucking are used effectively on the cloth gowns for winter.

SCARF COLLAR

LETTER FROM JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT TO LESLIE PRES. COTT

I miss you, miss you dear very much and I know you might have written me more than one letter. I don't want to get into those morbid feelings that you wrote me about. You're not going to leave little Jack and me. If you did we would both feel right after you and bring you back, no matter if you had sailed across the River Styx.

Between you and me, I do not believe that Dick Summers will ever marry Paula Peifer. In the first place I don't think Paula will ever marry any man except he be one of great wealth and, secondly, I do not think she wants to marry now. She is too much taken up with her work.

That was rather a smart epigram of Sally Atherton's, wasn't it dear to the effect that hypocrisy is the attribute that animals take on with their souls? She is a very bright woman, and she amuses me more than I can tell you. You bet I won't keep her, for don't mind tell ing you that I don't think by any possibility I would have gotten that last million and a half redressing contract if it hadn't been for her copy. It's corking!

Don't let Alice get your goat. I like you plump, I never liked these skinny women and whatever men may enjoy in the women who vamp them they certainly do not enjoy

Culture Is Betrayed In Your Speech

By EVANGELINE WEED
Director of Personal Institute,
Boston

In the preceding lesson it was pointed out that one's expression of thoughts is an important part of one's personality. An important feature of expression is the use of words and grammar.

1 How many words do I know? If you are an average person your vocabulary is considerably less than 5000. Yet the average dictionary—perhaps the sort you have in your home—contains 100,000 words or more. However, Shakespeare used only about 15,000 words, so if your usage reached 6,000 or 7,000 you would be well equipped to express yourself clearly. You can easily ascertain your vocabulary strength by taking a dictionary, going through it with a pencil and marking those words that you use.

2 How may I increase my vocabulary? At least once a day in reading or in conversation, you come across a word you would not use yourself. Look that word up. Learn it. Use it three times in conversation the next day. Every day add a word.

3 How may I learn of mistakes in word usage, grammar, pronunciation? There is only one way to learn any thing and that is to study but study need not be difficult. There are books on "words misused," "words mispronounced," and "common mistakes in grammar." Go to your library and study them.

Few people realize how they abuse the language. For instance, many people do not know what an adverb is; consequently they use one and their language is fightful. Others are constantly using one word when they mean another. And still more mispronounce words.

Adventures Of The Twins

SNOOZLE AND SNUGGLE AND SNORE

Nancy and Nick went around and turned all the town clocks back an hour.

And the Sand Man went to the moon and asked the moon man to hold the moon back an hour.

All because they needed a few more minutes till bed time. Tweeka nose having stolen the magic sand again and made off with it.

The Sand Man was quite pleased when Mister Peabrook the Moon Man, said quite obligingly, "Certainly I'm not." Anything to oblige you sir, and put his foot on the brake to keep the moon from going quite so fast.

Then looking at his speedometer, Mister Peabrook said, "The moon is now going only five thousand miles an hour. We will be an hour late tonight."

"Thank you kindly," said the Sand Man. "If the Twins come, please tell them that I have been to the Dream Maker Man's at the edge of the golden forest on the ice-mountain."

So away he went to the Dream Maker Man's where he lived with his three sons Snoozle and Snuggle and Snore.

The Dream Maker Man and his three sons were just walking after a long day's sleep, for they did most of their work at night.

"Heh, hum," said the Dream Maker Man stretching. "I hope none of the children were allowed to eat candy except one piece after dinner when they get stomach ache the next day."

As you go make an effort to breathe deeply and carry yourself well. Think of your appearance as you walk. Don't swing your arms violently or take long ungraceful strides.

Try to think of yourself as beautiful and making graceful.

Walking is one of the most effective beautifiers there is. You might try walking to the office of up town to do your shopping, then ride if you have the time.

So away he went to the Dream Maker Man's where he lived with his three sons Snoozle and Snuggle and Snore.

The Dream Maker Man and his three sons were just walking after a long day's sleep, for they did most of their work at night.

"Heh, hum," said the Dream Maker Man stretching. "I hope none of the children were allowed to eat candy except one piece after dinner when they get stomach ache the next day."

As you go make an effort to breathe deeply and carry yourself well. Think of your appearance as you walk. Don't swing your arms violently or take long ungraceful strides.

Then looking at his speedometer, Mister Peabrook said, "The moon is now going only five thousand miles an hour. We will be an hour late tonight."

"Thank you kindly," said the Sand Man. "If the Twins come, please tell them that I have been to the Dream Maker Man's at the edge of the golden forest on the ice-mountain."

NOTED COMMERCE
EXPERTS SPEAK AT DINNER TOMORROW

Roberts and Hay Desire to Meet
Large Number of Valley
Businessmen

Appleton and Fox river valley industries have right at their door the finest export organization in the midwest, giving service absolutely free of charge. This fact and many more concerning exporting and importing will be learned by the business men who attend luncheon at Conway
Hotel Thursday noon at which F. L.
Roberts and T. Park Hay of Chicago will be the speakers.

Mr. Roberts is manager of the Great Lakes district of the United States
Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce and comes to this vicinity to explain the widespread service the government is offering through its branch office located in Chicago.

Wisconsin is one of the leading states of the inland area in the amount of export and needs the guidance the federal office can give, according to Mr. Roberts, and he desires to meet as many business men as possible at the luncheon in order to offer advice and suggestions. He has written a number of articles for trade publications showing how essential it is to manufacturers and farmers alike to learn more about the foreign countries which are their market.

T. Park Hay, who comes here with him, is manager of the United States Shipping Board, the body which operates the war emergency fleet. He will speak largely of the best and cheapest methods of freighting goods to other ports.

All business men, even though they may not be interested in export trade, are invited to hear these men. Those contemplating expansion into foreign countries are promised valuable services. Reservations are to be made or telephone to the chamber of commerce to Monday.

EXILED RUSS PRELATE GETS ALASKAN OFFICE

"C. O. D." is the name of this Boston bull puppy, and "C. O. D." is being held at the Chicago post office because the man to whom it was mailed from Bellevue, Ia., refused to pay the $2.00 charges on it. The government must hold such packages for six months—but there is no law that provides funds for feeding uncollected mail. Miss Kathryn Sullivan of the Chicago post office made friends with "C. O. D." immediately.

FORESTRY EXPERT GIVES ADDRESS AT HIGH SCHOOL

H. N. Wheeler, forestry expert spoke on "Preservation of Our Forests and Forests' Life," before the student body of Appleton high school Tuesday morning. Mr. Wheeler is sent out by the United States forestry service to study conditions in various localities. Tuesday noon he spoke before the Rotary club at its regular meeting in Conway hotel.

baceo is the cigarette. Nicotin, the active principle of tobacco, is a poison which, taken into the system, inhibits growth to some extent and affects the nervous system unfavorably. Other things being equal, the boy who habitually uses tobacco is handicapping himself in competition with his fellows who do not use it, be the competition mental, moral or physical.

Opinions expressed by others who did not sign their names were:

"Cigaret smoking without inhalation is least injurious of all forms of use of tobacco. The habit is the most harmful up to the age of 18 years."

"Physical development of the growing boy is harmed by cigarettes because they are a nerve and heart depressant at any age before maturity. There is too much smoking among boys, especially those under 18."

"General impairment of the nervous system at least up to the age of 21 comes from excessive cigaret smoking."

In speedy New York they are selling straw hats for next season's wear. Over in Second Avenue, discarded straw lids of the present semester, gathered up by enterprising sidewalk merchants, are being sold at the curb for 25 cents each. Mohair hats and tan bags will help them weather the winter and next summer they will come from their hibernating spots, ready to protect a pate from a summer sun. You can buy anything from straw straws and toys to gold bricks and bedroom furniture on the sidewalks of New York.

Smoking Is Poor Route For Boys On Their Way To Manhood, Say Medics

Cigarette Habit Injures Nervous System and Affects Mental-ity of Young, Appleton Physicians Say in Questionnaire

Growing boys who think cigarette smoking helps their graduation into manhood, are regarding their physical development instead of fostering it, according to opinions expressed by several Appleton physicians and surgeons in response to a questionnaire sent out by the local Y. M. C. A.

Injury is done to the nervous system, mentality is lowered and digestion is impaired to the extent that it hampers physical upbuilding of the body, physicians say. This is especially true of boys younger than 15 or 16 and has the same effect on older ones if the habit is excessive and the tobacco smoke is inhaled.

Doctors join with ministers and educators who answered the Y. M. C. A. questionnaire in declaring that the war revealed more conclusively than ever the extent of harm done by the cigarette habit. They blame the war for increasing the amount of smoking. It is the opinion, however, that smoking is not a set habit with smaller boys, although they may indulge occasionally.

AFFECTS NERVES

"Smoking among young boys is injurious to the nervous system and lowers mentality," declares Dr. E. L. Folton. "It will have this effect on day conditions the most common form in which our boys are apt to use to smoke."
